WHAT HAPPENS

The event is divided into two parts.

Part 1: Participants are paired up and provided with instructions, materials, and tools to assemble their own cajons. Each cajon can be personalized — painted and decorated to reflect individual style and creativity.

Part 2: The group comes together as a real orchestra. They learn basic cajon-playing techniques and engage in musical interaction — using rhythm and performance as tools for communication, coordination, and shared expression.

WHO'S INVOLVED

The host guides the team throughout the entire event. He explains how to use the tools, follow the instructions, and helps participants solve any issues along the way. Once the cajons are assembled, the host introduces the instrument, shares playing techniques, and supports the group in all exercises and activities.

Professional musicians join to the session, creating a positive atmosphere, accompanying the team, and performing well-known songs with the participants.

WHEN TO USE IT

This event fits perfectly into any corporate setting — whether it's a conference, workshop, or team celebration. At the beginning, it helps the team connect, break the ice, and get ready for productive work.

At the end, it becomes a powerful grand finale — the highlight of an intense session that the team will remember for a long time.

This event also works perfectly as a standalone activity.
